Weather Alert

Window Rock, AZ; December 22, 2010 - The Navajo Department of Emergency Management Acting Director, Johnny Johnson, is advising the public be alert to the forecast for rain and snow for Northeastern Arizona into New Mexico beginning this evening into tomorrow.

Much of the Navajo Nation has undeveloped roads and there are people living in remote areas with livestock. Special needs individuals such as Dialysis Patients, the elderly and others who rely on frequent medical care need to be alert to the impending weather conditions. Travelers also should watch and listen to weather reports and plan accordingly.

If you don't need to travel, you should stay home and wait out the storm.

Much of the Navajo Nation is prone to flooding and mud conditions upon heavy precipitation.

Navajo Department of Emergency Management reminds motorists never to cross flooded bridges and roads.

The Navajo Nation Department of Emergency Management can be contacted through (928) 871-6892.
